Mr. Noble,
War Room.

Reference the attached cable, I do not think that either of these two men call for the sort of treatment which we try to give to Camp 020 cases. There is no suggestion that they are of any great importance, and quite plainly they are small fry compared with BRENN, who was never offered to us at all.

Whilst in an emergency we are always prepared to try to assist the Armies when for one reason or another they find themselves unable to conduct a particular interrogation, I think it is a very different matter asking us to take over ~~some~~ agents from Paris whom the French apparently do not think worth much attention.
